The externship is recommended for all professionals who counsel couples, including psychiatrists, psychologists, family physicians, social workers, psychiatric nurses, counsellors, pastors and clergy, and students training in these professions. Participants learn to see couple distress from an attachment perspective, help partners reprocess the emotional responses that maintain couple distress, and shape key new interaction and bonding events.

What is EFT

Emotionally Focused Couple Therapy (EFT) is an evidenced-based approach to help couples move from disconnection and frustration to a secure, trusting, loving bond. Many couples find they get into rigid repetitive negative cycles of interaction that makes communication difficult. EFT focuses on helping the couple to become aware of these negative cycles and to discover new ways of interaction that result in more positive cycles. It is like having a dancing lesson where each partner learns to keep in step with the other resulting in a more fluid, enjoyable dance. EFT represents the gold standard of couple therapy with a substantial research base, and is the only approach to couple therapy grounded in the science of adult love and bonding.

EFT is being used with many different kinds of couples in private practice, university training centres and hospital clinics and with many different cultural groups throughout the world. These distressed couples include partners suffering from disorders such as depression, post traumatic stress disorders, and chronic illness.

Robert Allan, PhD, LMFT, LPC

Robert lived in Halifax for 25 years and helped bring the first Externship to Halifax in 2012. He is an ICEEFT certified trainer, supervisor, and therapist who has helped train and supervise therapists and students in Emotionally Focused Therapy across Canada, the US, and Europe. Robert is currently researching the cultural adaptations of EFT and is developing training resources to help EFT therapists deepen the integration of culture into their EFT work. He is the co-editor of two books Cross-cultural Responsiveness and Systemic Therapy: Personal and Clinical Narratives and Creating Cultural Safety in Couple and Family Therapy: Supervision and Training as well as numerous peer reviewed journal articles.

Robert completed his PhD at Dalhousie University, he is a Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist in Colorado, and an Approved Supervisor with the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy. He is an Assistant Professor in the couple and family track of the graduate counseling program at the University of Colorado Denver. Robert maintains an active clinical and supervision practice in Denver, Colorado.

EFT is a combination of art and therapy.
